about at the will of their landlord.

Other tubes are built entirely of bits of moss and leaves. The commonest forms are those composed of little pebbles or grains of sand. These are usually very regular and smooth eviluders, in which the grains are all of nearly equal size, but among them you may frequently find some with several larger stones fastened to either side in a very curious manner. By far the prettiest houses of all are shaped like little spiral shells and are composed entirely of almost microscopical stones. — Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE KING OF SPAIN.

Rises Early, Is Apt in His Studies and Leaving Markes Well.

People in this country are so much accustomed to look upon the young king of Spain as a mere infant but recently promoted to knickerbockers that the following notes may serve to call attention to the fact that within a couple of years he will attain his legal majority and assume the reins of government of Spain in lieu of his mother, the present regent. He is tall, for his age, says the Washington Post, well developed, with a good, healthy color. His eyes are queck and intelligent and he is much better looking than he appears in his portrait. He is accustomed to all bodily exercises and rides horseback every day. An and rides horseback every day. Ar hour is spent daily in the gymnasium fitted up for his use and he also ha: a, daily lesson in fencing. He rises at seven all the year round; from 8:33 to 10 he studies; at 10 he goes rid-ing for an hour; from 11 till noon to 10 he studies; at 10 he goes riding for an hour; from 11 till noon lessons again; at noon comes lunchion, with a professor on duty and one of the generals in attendance; at the riding and driving. He dines at 7 with his sisters; at 8:30 he takes a music lesson and at 9 goes to bed. With regard to his studies, he is particularly fond of history and geography, speaks French, English and German fluently and is well up in Latin. He is devoted to his mother, who, while leading him to take a continually increasing part in the general life in court, endeavors as far questions and the good of history and genomiated the continually increasing part in the general life in court, endeavors as far possible to modernize all that etiquette which, dating from the reign of Philippe II., hampers intellect, sincerity and common sense. His habitual dress is that of a caded of the military school, the only indication of his rank being the ministure hadge of the Order of the Golden Fleece, which peeps forth from the Collar of histuine.
